HISTORICAL CONTEXT AND BACKGROUND

The framers of California's first state constitution of 1849 provided for both constitutional amendment and revision in Article X of that document--"Mode of Amending and Revising the Constitution." Section one outlined the procedure for amending the constitution, and section two presented procedural guidelines for revising the entire document.¹

According to Article X, any proposal to amend or revise the state constitution had to originate in the legislature. After a majority of both houses of two consecutive legislatures approved an amendment, it was submitted to the people for ratification. If ratified by a majority of the electors voting at the election, the amendment became part of the constitution.²

Any proposal to revise or change the entire constitution had to be approved by two-thirds of both houses of the legislature. After concurrence, the legislature would enact a statute "recommending" the electors to vote for or against calling a constitutional convention. If a majority of electors casting ballots voted for the convention, the legislature, during its next session, had to enact another statute that would provide for the convention. Within six months of the passage of the statute, the convention would convene. The minimum number of convention delegates had to equal the total membership of both houses of the legislature.³

In 1857, California voters ratified an amendment that added four sentences to Section two of Article X of the constitution. The amendment provided procedural guidelines for the remainder of the revision process. The new constitution adopted by the convention would be submitted to popular vote for ratification at a special election called for that purpose. Voters would deposit "tickets" inscribed either "For the New Constitution," or "Against the New Constitution" in the ballot box. Specifically named state officers counted and certified the election returns to the governor. If the "majority of the whole number of votes cast" were in favor of the revised document, the executive of the state then declared, by proclamation, that the revised document was the constitution of the state.⁴

It is important to note that at each election in the amendment or revision process, the votes in favor of either change had to represent a majority of the total ballots cast at the election, rather than simply more yes than no votes. For example, electors voted for or against calling a convention at the same time that they voted for assembly members at general elections. An elector had the choice of voting for the convention, against the convention, or not voting at all on that issue. Prior to 1877, the legislature called the question of constitutional revision at three general elections, but a majority of voters chose not to address the question on their ballots. Although more electors voted for than against the convention, the affirmative votes did not constitute a majority of votes actually cast. The call to revise the constitution was repeatedly defeated.⁵

On April 3, 1876, the California legislature passed An Act recommending to the electors of the state to vote for or against a Convention to revise and change the Constitution of the State (Chapter 516, Stats. 1875-76). The statute called for the electors to vote for or against a constitutional convention, "at the first general election for members of the Legislature had after the passage of this Act." In the September 5, 1877, general election, 73,460 of the 146,055 electors casting ballots voted "for the convention," 44,214 electors voted "against the convention," and 28,381 declined to address the issue on their ballots. The 73,460 votes "for the convention" represented a majority of the total ballots cast in the election.⁶

The California Legislature passed on March 30, 1878, An Act to provide for a Convention to frame a new Constitution for the State of California (Chapter 490, Stats. 1877-78). The statute called for a special election to be held on the third Wednesday in June, 1878, for the purpose of electing delegates to the convention. The act provided that a total of 152 delegates be elected, consisting of 120 delegates specifically apportioned by county, and thirty-two delegates elected "at large," eight from each congressional district. As in legislative and congressional districting, the legislature based apportionment on population.⁷

In the eighty days that passed between the passage of the act and election day (June 19, 1878), California's political parties quickly organized for the purpose of nominating delegates. While the conservative, moderate, and liberal press editorialized about candidates in their newspapers, state political conventions met in San Francisco. Local party organizations held county and municipal meetings. By June 19, six major parties were running tickets. The Non-Partisan Party consisted of a coalition of old-line Democrats and Republicans. Those delegates appearing on the straight Democratic or Republican tickets were running in opposition to the old-line Democratic and Republican parties. The Workingmen's Party of California (WPC) was a new party organized principally by Denis Kearney in San Francisco. The Anti-Kearney Workingmen represented a small faction headed by Frank Roney that had broken away from Kearney's leadership. The National Labor Party aligned itself with the socialist Workingmen's Party of the United States (not associated with the WPC).⁸

On June 19, 1878, voters elected the 152 convention delegates on two principal and two lesser political tickets. The Non-Partisan ticket supplied the convention with seventy-nine representatives, a majority. The next largest ticket, the Workingmen's Party of California, filled fifty delegate positions, most of those coming from San Francisco. Voters also elected thirteen Republicans (including two who ran as Independents), and ten Democrats from the "rebellious" straight party tickets (see chart one for a listing of all delegates).⁹

THE PROCEEDINGS

Following the procedural guidelines as outlined in the enabling act of 1878, the elected delegates met "in Convention in the Assembly Chamber at the Capitol, in the City of Sacramento, on the twenty-eighth of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, at twelve o'clock M." Although the act stipulated that "no compensation shall be allowed delegates after the expiration of one hundred days," the convention lasted until March 3, 1879, 157 days. The convention actually convened a total of 127 days, working Monday through Saturday, and taking five holidays. The delegation did not meet on Sundays (a total of twenty-three days), or on Columbus Day (Saturday, October 12), Thanksgiving (Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, November 28, 29, and 30), Christmas (Wednesday, December 25), New Years (Wednesday, January 1), or on George Washington's birthday (Saturday, February 22).¹⁰

Organization

The delegates spent the first ten days of the proceedings organizing the convention. Organization included choosing officers, filling vacancies, establishing rules and orders of business, and installing the several committees that would review and revise the constitution, article-by-article. It was during this period of organization that the two principal political factions struggled to gain authority over the proceedings. The WPC, which had been meeting in caucus prior to convening, battled with the small but politically prominent group of conservative Non-Partisans. At stake were the strategic positions of convention president and delegate seats left vacant by resignation and death.

Governor William Irwin presided over the convention until the body elected a president from its own number. For the first two days Irwin called the proceedings to order, administered oaths of office to delegates, and appointed temporary staff. Secretary of State Thomas Beck served as temporary secretary, calling the roll and reading resolutions.

On the afternoon of the second day (Monday, September 30), after heated debate and five roll-call votes, the delegation elected Non-Partisan Joseph P. Hoge president of the convention. The following day, again after five roll-call votes and much debate, the delegation elected J. A. Johnson, nominated by the Non-Partisans, secretary of the convention. After a committee of seven delegates had determined the number and compensation of officers needed, President Hoge appointed such officers as porters, pages, door-keepers, post master, and mail carrier. The delegation elected the remaining officers--president pro tem, assistant secretaries, sergeant-at-arms, assistant sergeant-at-arms, minute clerk, and journal clerk. By October 4, the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses had determined the mileage and per diem to be allowed to each delegate, and the pay of officers.

Although the question of the necessity and compensation of a phonographic reporter (or stenographer) caused repeated debate during the convention, by the sixth day, October 4, the convention adopted resolutions providing for a written record of the debates and proceedings. The enabling act had provided for stenographers, but stated only "[t]he Convention may select Phonographic Reporters, and fix the amount of their compensation." E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton's Debates and Proceedings of the Constitutional Convention, is a verbatim account of the entire proceedings published by the State Printing Office in 1881. Beginning on September 28, 1878, the published Debates indicate that stenographers must have been present from the first day.¹¹

On October 4 and 5, the delegates were busily engaged with the task of filling vacancies. The heated debate of that Friday and Saturday centered on the political camps of the replacement delegates. The legislature had, in the enabling act, provided for the filling of vacancies through election by the remaining delegates. The act did not, however, stipulate whether the nominations should come from runners-up from the popular election, or whether the replacements should come from the same political party as the original delegate. Thomas Morris, WPC delegate from San Francisco, is an example. Because he was not an American citizen, Morris had to resign his seat at the convention. The WPC delegation struggled ferociously to seat another WPC candidate who had run during the election; but, after seven roll-call votes, Smith B. Thompson, a Republican teacher-carpenter from San Francisco, took his seat.¹²

During the course of the convention, four vacancies occurred due to death, and one vacancy was caused by the "insanity" of a delegate. Former governor Henry H. Haight had been elected on the Non-Partisan ticket, second congressional district, but died before the convention convened. George M. Hardwick, a Non-Partisan delegate representing Merced and Mariposa counties, also died before the convention convened. On October 5, the convention elected Non-Partisans J. West Martin and James M. Strong to replace Haight and Hardwick respectively.

In mid-November James M. Strong died. By late November Bernard F. Kenny, WPC delegate from San Francisco, had also died. The delegation did not act on the vacancies until December 18, when they elected William J. Howard of Mariposa County to replace Strong, and John J. Kenny of San Francisco to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his brother Bernard. Kenny was the only replacement to come from the ranks of the WPC.

On October 21, delegate William W. Moreland, Non-Partisan from Sonoma County, presented a resolution that addressed the "suggested" vacancy caused by the "insanity" of delegate Jehu Berry, Democrat from Siskiyou and Modoc counties. Moreland moved that "on Friday the 25th day of October, 1878 at 11 o'clock A.M.," the convention "proceed to the election of some qualified person to fill said vacancy." On motion of WPC delegate Henry Larkin, the delegation tabled the resolution and did not attempt to fill the vacancy at any later date. On October 23, the minute clerk recorded that Berry, who had been absent since October 14, had been granted indefinite leave of absence "on account of sickness." Jehu Berry did not return for the remainder of the convention, and was not present at the signing of the constitution on March 3. Perhaps thinking Moreland's resolution in poor taste, and out of respect for Berry's privacy and illness, the convention did not fill his vacancy or address the issue further in the debates.¹³

¹³ Working Papers, Minutes, September 28, 1878 to March 3,

On October 2, President Hoge appointed members to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business. By October 7, the committee supplied the delegation with a list of standing committees (delegate members to be appointed by the chair), and with the Standing Rules and Orders of the convention. The following two days President Hoge announced the standing committees along with the names of delegates assigned to each committee (see chart two).

The rules committee had established thirty separate standing committees. Twenty-five committees were to consider individual topics or articles to be included in the constitution. Five committees would handle the special business of the convention and oversee the actual construction of the document. The twenty-five committees, such as the committees on the Preamble and Bill of Rights, Right of Suffrage, Legislative Department, Executive Department, and Judicial Department, were responsible for the drafting of individual articles of the proposed constitution. The five remaining committees were: Revision and Adjustment, Reporting and Printing, Engrossment and Enrollment, Privileges and Elections, and Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

President Hoge occasionally appointed members to special committees created to handle specific, immediate problems. Examples were the committee on a Phonographic Reporter, and the committee on Additional Employees. The delegation authorized the committees to determine the necessity and compensation of an official stenographer, and additional staff. At times the convention requested a regular standing committee to consider a problem outside of their normal article review and advise the body in a special report. For example, the Committee on the Judicial Department provided a special report which determined the legislative intent of the enabling act regarding funds chargeable with the expenses of the convention. The delegation also asked that committee to report on the eligibility of Judge Eugene Fawcett of Santa Barbara to his seat in the convention. The 1849 constitution had specifically restricted judges from holding any other constitutional offices while on the bench (Article VI, Judicial Department, section sixteen).¹⁴

The seventy-three-item "Standing Rules and Orders" adopted by the delegation on October 8, set out the rules for the proceedings as well as guidelines for conducting the business of the convention. Using Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies (specifically cited in rule fifty-nine), the committee reiterated recognized rules of conduct, debate, and procedure for legislative and parliamentary bodies. The convention rules ranged in subject from the hour of convening (rule one), to debate decorum (rules forty-two, forty-four, and forty-six), to a prohibition against smoking in the assembly chamber (rule sixty-seven). With the exception of a prohibition against amending or suspending rules fifty through fifty-three and fifty-five regarding the amendment process, convention rules could be amended by a two-thirds vote of the members present. Throughout the convention, members debated and amended the rules.¹⁵

The roll calls and voting records contained in the Minutes for those same days verify that Berry was not actually present.

Rule seventeen of the "Standing Rules and Orders" established the official succession of daily business of the convention. The eleven part "Order of Business" proceeded in the following sequence:

1. Roll Call
2. Reading and Approval of the Journal
3. Presentations of Petitions and Memorials
4. Communications from State Officers
5. Reports of Standing Committees
6. Reports of Select Committees
7. Introduction of Resolutions and Propositions relating to the Constitution
8. Unfinished Business
9. Special Orders
10. General Order
11. Miscellaneous Motions and Resolutions¹⁶

According to the rules committee, the Petitions and Memorials referred to in part three included "remonstrances" and "communications from individuals and public bodies." Throughout the proceedings individuals and public groups petitioned the delegation in the interest of such issues as equal taxation, convict labor, mechanic's liens, women's suffrage, "Local Option" liquor laws, and recognition of the sabbath in the constitution. The working papers contain over forty such petitions, some with signature pages attached measuring over fifteen feet in length. Each day, after the presentation and reading of petitions and memorials, President Hoge referred them to the appropriate standing committee. After considering the petitions, the committees either favored the interest with inclusion in their articles for the constitution, or recommended no action at all.¹⁷

Often committees asked state officers, such as Secretary of State Thomas Beck, to supply data that they required for construction of constitutional articles. The fourth order of business, "Communications from State Officers," included "communications from public officers, and from corporations in response to calls for information." In addition to Secretary of State Beck, state officers such as Surveyor General William Minis, Superintendent of State Printing Frank P. Thompson, State Controller William B. C. Brown, and Adjutant General P. F. Walsh sent reports to the delegation in response to inquiries. As with public petitions, the secretary read the reports to the delegation and the president then ordered them referred to the appropriate committee for action.¹⁸

Revising the Constitution

Following part seven of rule seventeen, "Order of Business," each delegate had the opportunity to present two independently proposed amendments to the constitution. By October 9, much of the organization of the convention had been completed. The delegates began to submit their "propositions" (proposed amendments) as the secretary called their names in alphabetic, roll-call order. A delegate handed his proposed amendment or amendments to the secretary, who read them to the body and numbered them sequentially. The chair then ordered each proposition printed and referred to the appropriate committee. The committees considered the individual propositions for inclusion in their new articles of the constitution. On October 10, the delegation adopted a resolution that all propositions be submitted as an article or section of an article "in the proper form to be embodied in the constitution."¹⁹

Delegates submitted proposed amendments on almost a daily basis until December 4, when the minute clerk recorded the receipt of amendment number 519 in the "minutes." After December 4, the delegates continued to present their propositions, but less frequently. By late January 1879, the secretary had numbered 538 amendments. Not all of the original drafts of the proposed amendments are extant, and some were not numbered. However, the state printing office created two bound volumes of printed, sequentially numbered proposed amendments entitled "Proposed Amendments to the Constitution, 1878-79."²⁰

Much of the construction of the constitution took place during the meetings of the standing committees of the convention. Unfortunately, little evidence remains to indicate what actually occurred in committee chambers. Although committees employed clerks, with the exception of a few pages of Revenue and Taxation committee minutes, standing committee meeting minutes are not extant in the working papers. The working papers and published Debates and Proceedings of the convention contain committee majority and minority reports and drafts of articles, but they do not contain accounts of standing committee debate. It should be noted that the convention provided desks for newspaper correspondents to cover the proceedings. On October 15, the convention tabled a resolution presented by delegate Charles Beerstecher stating that the "accredited" members of the press should "be privileged to be present at all regular meetings of standing committees." The researcher is advised to review newspapers such as the Sacramento Record-Union and the Sacramento Bee for evidence of debate in committee chambers.²¹

Meeting in separate rooms and chambers of the capital building (the legislature did not convene that year), the committees probably met in the early afternoons and evenings until they had completed their article draft. Rule fifty-four of the "Standing Rules and Orders" prohibited committee meetings while the convention was in session. On October 15, Henry Edgerton presented a resolution calling for daily adjournment "after completing the sixth order of business" from October 15 to October 23 to allow for committee meetings. The convention adopted the resolution, resolving that the committees begin reporting back to the body by October 23. The convention minutes indicate that for seven days, October 16 to October 23, the convention adjourned for the day before 11:00 a.m. Because the convention typically adjourned at approximately 5:00 p.m. daily, the early hour indicates that the delegates adjourned early to reassemble into committees.²²

Although the committee on the Preamble and Bill of Rights reported back to the

The California State Archives has only the first volume of "Proposed Amendments to the Constitution, 1878-79" (WPA #363, Rare Books Library), which contains amendments one through 369. Volume two may perhaps be found at the California State Library, Law or Government Publications divisions. The volumes were probably created for the use of the convention and not published because volume one contains no publication data page.

convention on October 24, many committees did not report until late December or January. No doubt many committees were ready to report, but could not because the convention was occupied with debating and amending previously reported articles. Additionally, newly constructed or controversial articles, such as Revenue and Taxation or Corporations, probably required more time in committee to complete than simply revised articles such as State Indebtedness or Education. The extant minutes of the committee on Revenue and Taxation, dated October 16-18, 21-23, and 29, contain entries such as "7-P.M." and "Evening Session." The committee reported the article on Revenue and Taxation on December 24. The time-consuming debate that followed (eleven days in Committee of the Whole, five days in convention, and two days for second reading) indicates that much contention surrounded the article.²³

Each of the twenty-two articles that ultimately comprised the new constitution proceeded through the same schedule of activity. Standing committees drafted articles and reported them to the convention. Each delegate received a printed copy of the article. The convention then discussed, debated, amended, or deleted portions of articles, section-by-section, in Committee of the Whole. The Committee of the Whole was the whole delegation resolved into a committee for the purpose of considering one topic only. No other house business could be attended to while a parliamentary or legislative body was in Committee of the Whole. Rule fifty-eight of the "Standing Rules and Orders" mandated that all proposed alterations to the constitution be considered in Committee of the Whole before being debated and finally acted on in convention. The Committee of the Whole reviewed, debated, amended, and adopted or rejected each section of an article by a majority vote. Every proposed amendment to each section had to be put to a vote. Every section had to be adopted or rejected by a majority vote.²⁴

Each delegate again received a printed copy of each article as amended in the Committee of the Whole, and the secretary placed the article on General File for the first convention reading. Following rule fifty-three of the convention rules, all proposed amendments reported by committees had to be read and then "placed on a general file to be kept by the Secretary in the order in which they [were] reported." They would be removed and "acted upon" in that order. By January 27, the convention began first readings of the amended articles. The primary purpose of the first reading was to adopt or reject the actions of the Committee of the Whole. The delegation considered each amended section of an article in numeric sequence, either "concurring in" or rejecting Committee of the Whole amendments by majority vote. During the first reading process, additional amendments could be proposed and adopted or rejected by majority. An entirely new section of an article could be proposed and put to vote, but only after all Committee of the Whole amendments were taken up. First reading commenced on January 27 with the Preamble and Bill of Rights, and concluded on February 20 with the Miscellaneous Subjects article. When the convention had completed the first reading of an article, the chair would order the article to be engrossed (formally printed) for the second reading.²⁵

As before the first readings, the delegates began the second reading consideration of articles with engrossed copies of each article on their desks. Beginning February 20 and ending February 27, the delegation proceeded with the second reading of articles at a faster pace than the first reading. The second reading process allowed the convention to review the work they had done, amend sections of articles, or add new sections with majority concurrence. The second reading concluded with a vote for or against the adoption of the entire article as part of the constitution. By this step in the revision process, most of the debate had concluded. The delegation completed the second readings of six of the final twenty-two articles on February 20, two articles the following day, one article on February 25, four more the next day, and nine articles on February 27. The convention did not convene on Saturday, February 22, George Washington's birthday, or Sunday, February 23. The convention began the second reading of the Judicial Department article Friday, February 21, continued through Monday, and finished the following day. After each second-reading vote on an article, the chair referred the adopted article to the committee on Revision and Adjustment.²⁶

The committee on Revision and Adjustment, to which the chair referred all adopted articles, reported back to the convention on four consecutive days: Thursday and Friday, February 27 and 28; Saturday, March 1; and Monday, March 3. On the first day the committee advised the delegation regarding the construction of their report. The final printed report would contain all articles, placed in recommended order and sequentially numbered. To assist the delegation, which would have to concur in all amendments that had been made to each article during the convention, all amendments would be printed in italics, and any words or phrases that had been "stricken out" would appear in brackets.²⁷

On Friday the committee on Revision and Adjustment reported on the Preamble, Article I (Bill of Rights), Article V (Executive Department), Article VII (Pardoning Power), Article VIII (Militia), Article XIX (Chinese), Article XXI (Boundary), and Article XIV (Water and Water Rights). Again the delegation reviewed all previously amended sections of each article individually. On majority concurrence the chair referred the articles to the committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment (final formal printing) in the constitution. With the exception of the Chinese article, which endured even more debate, the delegation quickly reviewed the first seven reported articles.²⁸

The committee on Revision and Adjustment reported back the remaining fifteen articles the following day. The committee presented on Saturday: Article II (Right of Suffrage), Article III (Distribution of Powers), Article IV (Legislative Department), Article VI (Judicial Department), Article IX (Education), Article X (State Institutions and Public Buildings), Article XI (Cities, Counties, and Towns), Article XII (Corporations), Article XIII (Revenue and Taxation), Article XV (Harbor Frontages, Etc.), Article XVI (State Indebtedness), XVII (Land and Homestead Exemption), Article XVIII (Amending and Revising the Constitution), Article XX (Miscellaneous Subjects), and XXII (Schedule). The convention immediately "concurred in" the amendments to all but three of the reported articles. The articles on the Judicial Department, Education, and Corporations stood more debate, but were that day referred to the committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment with the other twelve articles.²⁹

On Monday, March 3, the final day of the convention, the committee on Revision and Adjustment presented each delegate with a copy of their final printed report as promised. The report recommended some "changes of phraseology and arrangement," and listed the articles in recommended numbered order, one through twenty-two. The report enumerated, section-by-section, every adopted amendment to each article. After adopting the report, the delegation ordered it printed in the journal. Following the report of the committee on Revision and Adjustment, the committee on Reporting and Printing, the last committee to consider the revised articles, reported the constitution "correctly enrolled on parchment."³⁰ (Consult chart three for the revision process for each new article).

Adopting the Constitution

With the exception of the reading of the constitution by the secretary, the delegation proceeded on the final day of the 127-day convention in traditional parliamentary manner. After the Committee on Reporting and Printing presented the enrolled constitution, Secretary Smith began to read it. Before long the delegation began to tire of hearing its work. After two motions, the delegates, by a vote of seventy-four to fifty-eight, dispensed with the formality of the reading. The body then adopted the constitution by a vote of 120 ayes, fifteen noes. (Of the 152 original delegates, 120 voted for the constitution, fifteen voted against it, fifteen delegates were absent, and two paired with two absent members to cancel four votes).³¹

After formal adoption of the constitution, the delegates proceeded to authenticate the document with their signatures. First, President Hoge and Secretary Smith signed. Then, as the secretary called their names from the roll-call sheet in alphabetical order, the delegates came to the front of the chamber and applied their signatures. The delegation had passed resolutions on the previous day that outlined procedures for signing, printing, and distributing the completed constitution. Delegate Henry Edgerton presented a resolution directing the Secretary of State, in whose charge the enrolled document would be placed, to allow any absent delegate who had not signed the constitution thirty days to add his signature. To facilitate Edgerton's resolution, President Hoge ordered the names of fourteen absent delegates entered in the journal. Hoge allowed delegate George V. Smith to sign for the fifteenth absent delegate, V. A. Gregg, because Gregg had previously given Smith authorization.³²

After the last delegate had affixed his name, President Hoge called the convention to order for the purpose of formally placing the enrolled constitution in the custody of Secretary of State Thomas Beck. Hoge ceremoniously addressed Beck:

Mr Secretary: The Constitutional Convention, convened here by authority of law for the purpose of framing a new Constitution for the State of California, have instructed me to place that Constitution, duly attested by its officers and signed by the members of the Convention, in your hands for the purpose of being preserved in the archives of the State. In compliance with that resolution I now place in your hand the Constitution which this Convention has framed and adopted.

Accompanied by the applause of the delegation, Beck "stepped forward and received the Constitution." He responded to Hoge, "Mr. President: The new Constitution which you have placed in my hands I will safely deposit in the archives of the State, and I will duly transmit the same to my successor in office."³³

Next the convention proceeded to the adoption of their "Address to the People of the State of California." On February 20, delegate Charles W. Cross had presented a resolution directing President Hoge to appoint a committee of nine delegates to prepare Boggs, Alexander Campbell, Eugene Casserly, David H. Cowden, Robert Crouch, Eugene Fawcett, Charles G. Finney, Jr., James E. Hale, John F. Miller, Alonzo E. Noel, Albert P. Overton, and Samuel M. Wilson. The signatures of absent delegates Hale and Overton are affixed to the enrolled constitution in alphabetical order with the signatures of the delegates who were present on March 3. The names of the remaining twelve absent members do not appear on the enrolled constitution.

"an address to the people of the State . . . indicating the material changes made in the existing constitution." The delegation rejected Cross's resolution, but later adopted a similar resolution presented by Wilbur F. Huestis. On February 24, a slim majority of delegates adopted Huestis's resolution, sixty-two ayes to fifty-four noes. The resolution directed Hoge to appoint a committee of one member for each judicial district "to prepare an address to the people of the State, setting forth concisely the principal amendments proposed by this convention to the present constitution, and . . . the reasons therefor." On the final day of the proceedings, the convention secretary read the address which the delegation adopted by a vote of 103 ayes to thirty noes. Copies of the address would be distributed with the printed copies of the constitution to the voting public.³⁴

After they had adopted the public "address," delegates offered formal resolutions which recorded the "thanks of the convention" to various officers and staff of the proceedings. The delegation adopted resolutions recognizing the assistance of state agencies as well. Resolutions formally thanked President Hoge, "the several Secretaries and Journal Clerks," Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms Benjamin Chambers, the pages, and porters. The convention recognized "the state officers for their prompt and courteous response to the demands of the convention." The delegation thanked Superintendent of State Printing Frank P. Thompson "for the prompt, efficient, and thorough manner in which the work in his department for this convention has been done." Thompson must have worked his staff through many evenings preparing and printing hundreds of copies of documents that had to be ready for the next day's business.³⁵

Although it was the final day of the convention, Thompson's work was not nearly finished. Thousands of copies of the constitution and the accompanying address to the people had to be printed for public distribution. Additionally, after unanimously adopting the resolution thanking Thompson, the convention immediately adopted another resolution authorizing him "to print nine hundred and sixty copies of the Constitution, as correctly enrolled, for the use of the delegates."³⁶

The final actions of the body included presentations of gifts. Delegate Morris M. Estee, on behalf of the delegation, conferred to Sergeant-at-Arms Thomas J. Sherwood a watch and chain as "a slight token of [their] esteem." Estee told Sherwood that he hoped the gift would serve as "a reminder that this Convention believed that [he] had faithfully performed [his] duty." Delegate Joseph W. Winans presented a golden gavel to President Hoge on behalf of the porters of the convention. Delegate George A. Johnson, speaking for his "fraters" at the convention, presented President Hoge with a collection of books by writers, essayists, critics, historians, and dramatists such as Charles Dickens, John Motley, Washington Irving, Thomas De Quincey, Michel Montaigne, Thomas Macaulay, and Richard Sheridan. Johnson and the "friends" of Hoge at the convention, offered the "one hundred volumes of standard literary works" as a "slight testimonial of their respect and regard," and to say "Farewell to Mr. President." Hoge responded with humble thanks and a promise to "treasure [the] beautiful gift for all time." The collection would serve as a reminder to his children after he had "gone" that "their father had merited" the "kind consideration and approbation" of the delegation over which he had presided.³⁷

The delegation had completed signing of the constitution at noon on the final day, and, by 1:00, weary delegates were moving for adjournment. Perhaps to end the presentations and resolutions of thanks, delegate James E. Murphy, non-partisan Democrat from Del Norte County, stated: "I would like to have thanks returned to everybody and everything--except President Hayes." Amid the laughter caused by Murphy's remark, delegate and former Secretary of State William Van Voorhies moved "that the thanks of the Convention be returned to the 'silent members'." Above the continued laughter, President Hoge declared Van Voorhies's resolution "unanimously adopted." At 1:15 in the afternoon, President Hoge declared the convention adjourned sine die.³⁸

RATIFYING THE CONSTITUTION

Section seven of the 1878 enabling act had made general provisions for popular ratification or rejection of the new constitution. Sections four through nine of Article XXII (Schedule) of the revised constitution provided detailed instructions regarding ratification. A special election would be held on the first Wednesday of May, 1879. The election could settle no other question but constitutional ratification. Thirty days before the election, the state superintendent of printing had to print "in pamphlet form" as many copies of the constitution as there were registered voters, and mail one copy to the post office address of each registered voter. Postal carriers would deliver copies to the voters who had not picked up their pamphlets within ten days of receipt at the post office. Thirty days before the first Wednesday in May, the executive had to issue a proclamation, to be "made public" by the "Boards of Supervisors of the several counties," calling the election. On April 2, 1879, Governor William Irwin issued a proclamation that the election would be held on Wednesday, May 7, 1879. Qualified voters were all persons entitled to vote for members of the assembly.³⁹

As had occurred with the elections for constitutional delegates the previous summer, the campaign for and against the new constitution was waged principally in the newspapers of the state. Most major city newspapers, such as those in Oakland, Sacramento, and Stockton, editorialized against the new constitution. Media support of the revised organic law was more conspicuous in the southern part of the state. Newspapers such as the Los Angeles Express reported favorably, while the San Francisco Alta and the Sacramento Record-Union were openly hostile. The San Francisco Chronicle was the only prominent northern newspaper to promote the new document. Calling it a "loyal champion," political scientist Carl Brent Swisher asserted that the San Francisco Chronicle was "probably the most effective organ in the state in support of the work of the constitutional convention."⁴⁰

Complicated constitutional articles, such as the article on revenue and taxation, caused as much controversy before the people as they had caused debate during the convention. The media used sensitive issues such as revenue and taxes as points of attack or defense of the new document. Focusing on regional interests as they related to the issues, local groups formed "constitution clubs" and "anti-constitution clubs" all over the state. Newspapers announced the dates, times, and places of club meetings, and reported topics of discussion. In addition to newspapers, privately funded organizations, particularly those in opposition to the new constitution, printed and distributed circulars and pamphlets to voters. For the two months that passed between the completion of the new constitution and the popular election, California was the scene of an intense political competition.⁴¹

Twenty days before the election, the state superintendent of printing had to print and send to every county clerk two types of ballots. Printed on "legal ballot paper" furnished by the secretary of state, the ballots would separately state "For the new Constitution," or "Against the new Constitution." After receiving five times the number of each type of ballot as there were registered voters in their counties, the county clerks were to distribute equal numbers of both ballots to the inspectors of elections. As during standard elections, county officers were responsible for canvassing the vote and sending certified returns to the governor. The returns were to be forwarded no later than the second Monday after the election, or May 19, 1879.⁴²

As soon as all the returns were in, or within thirty days of the election, the governor, assisted by the controller, treasurer, and secretary of state, had to "open and compute" the vote. The June 6, 1879 statement of vote--attested by Governor Irwin, Controller Daniel Kenfield, Treasurer José Estudillo, and Secretary of State Thomas Beck--listed alphabetically, each county's returns and statewide totals. The total received statewide was 145,212 votes, including 77,959 ballots for the new constitution, 67,134 ballots against the new constitution, and 119 "votes rejected."⁴³

Following the mandates of the enabling act and Article XXII of the constitution, on June 7, 1879, Governor Irwin issued a proclamation certifying that "a majority of the whole number of votes cast" were in favor of the new constitution. The revised fundamental law of the state would become effective as specified in section twelve of the Schedule (Article XXII):

This Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock meridian [noon], so far as the same relates to the election of all officers, the commencement of their terms of office and the meeting of the Legislature. In all other respects, and for all other purposes, this Constitution shall take effect on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, at twelve o'clock meridian.

In his proclamation, Irwin declared the new constitution to be "the Constitution of the State of California."⁴⁴

⁴³ Ibid.; Secretary of State, Election Papers, Statement of Vote, May 7, 1879 Election canvassed June 6, 1879; The Statement of Vote shows the secretary of state's handwritten tally of votes in columns next to a printed list of California counties. The counties of Klamath and Mariposa have no votes. Klamath county ceased to exist in 1874, its territory annexed by Humboldt and Siskiyou counties. Mariposa county's election return must have been lost at the time of the canvassing. The archives contains a "duplicate" copy with a file date of May 12, 1879 by the county clerk, but a "received" date of June 25, 1879--too late to be counted. Mariposa County's total vote of 805, including 447 ballots cast for the new constitution and 358 votes against it, would not have effected the outcome of the statewide total. Names of state officers may be found in Appendix C, E. Dotson Wilson, Chief Clerk of the Assembly, California's Legislature, 1993-94 (Sacramento: California State Assembly, 1994), pp. 193, 195, 197, 198.

8. Proposed Amendments and Articles. 79 file folders. F3956:83-161

Proposed Amendments Nos. 1 to 538, plus unnumbered.

Proposed Amendments Nos. 1 to 538 include those that became articles of the new constitution. Amendment articles include standing committee reports, committee drafts of articles, and amended versions (if extant). Individual delegates were authors of most proposed amendments to the constitution. Standing committees authored proposed amendments that became articles of the constitution.

9. Amended Articles Reported by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment. 3 file folders. F3956:162-164

After the convention finally adopted each article, they referred the articles to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment. The committee made sure that all revisions and adjustments made during the amendment process were properly incorporated and noted. The Committee on Revision and Adjustment reported back every article of the new constitution to the delegation on February 27, 28, March 1, and 3, 1879. From the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, the articles went to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for final enrollment in the constitution.

Three Committee on Revision and Adjustment reports, arranged chronologically according to the date reported to the convention.

Files contain Committee on Revision and Adjustment reports of:

February 27, 1879

February 28, 1879, including articles I, V, VII, VIII, XIX, XXI, and XIV.

March 1, 1879, including articles II, III, IV, VI, IX, X, XI, XII, XIII, XV, XVI, XVII, XVIII, XX, XXII.

10. Printer's Drafts of Articles. 10 file folders. F3956:165-174

As with legislative bills, at every stage of article construction and amendment--first draft, Committee of the Whole amendment, first and second reading amendment--articles were printed and reprinted at the state printing office (then located near the capital at 15th and L streets).

Arranged sequentially by original article amendment number (before constitutional article number applied). Does not include every article of the finished constitution.

Files contain extant printer's drafts of:

First draft, proposed amendment 524 (1 ff).

Articles amended in Committee of the Whole, including proposed amendments 178, 402, 414, 454, 485, 501, 503, 504, 510, 514, 515, 521, 523, 524, 532, 535, 536, 537 (5 ff).

Articles amended in convention, including proposed amendments 178, 402, 444, 454, 468, 485, 501, 503, 504, 510, 514, 515, 521, 523, 524, 526, 532, 534, 535, 536, 537 (4 ff)

The convention minute clerk recorded each day's business of the convention--including all roll-call votes, resolutions, petitions, motions to amend rules, and amendments--in the Minutes. After daily adjournment, the journal clerk would record and verify the Minutes (with a blue check mark) for entry in the journal. With the exception of the Minutes for Tuesday, February 25, 1879, the Minutes are extant for the remaining 126 days that the convention met.
